Preventing work-related ill health through the design and delivery of an effective occupational health programme is critical to protect workers and reduce absence.

Event overview

At this unique event, specialists and industry representatives will provide their expert opinions and practical experience on a number of topics to improve understanding and control of occupational health risks, including:

- how to conduct a health risk assessment
- how to design an effective screening programme
- developments in some key health areas, such as noise and respiratory protection
- the importance of collaboration between HR, OH and safety professionals to reduce OH risks
- the emerging legal trends and why we should all take health more seriously.

What's in it for you

By attending, delegates will:

- gain a broader knowledge of occupational health issues
- learn how to implement an effective health programme
- achieve a greater awareness of the importance of health in the workplace
- understand how to deliver long-term and sustainable solutions to occupational health
- benefit from excellent networking opportunities.

Who should attend

This event is relevant to a broad audience from all manufacturing sectors, including:

- members and non-members
- safety and health practitioners
- occupational health practitioners
- HR professionals
- line managers
- employee representatives.

As with all IOSH events, any value gained from attending this event can be recorded in your CPD portfolio.

What you need to know

This event will include lunch and refreshments.

If you have any queries, please contact Louise Griffin, Events Assistant Co-ordinator, on +44 (0)116 257 3373 or email louise.griffin@iosh.com.
